ENLT 520 The Hebrew Bible/Old Testament as Literature (3 credits)
This course addresses the Hebrew Bible or Old Testament, one of the most influential texts in all of world literature, as a collection of texts from several distinct genres, including patriarchal narratives, etiological stories, legal material, psalms, prophetic poetry, erotic poetry, folk tales, historical writing, and wisdom literature. The distinctive literary features of these genres will be addressed. This course also considers the history of the Bible’s composition and redaction, how it fits in the context of other Ancient Near Eastern literatures, and its impact on later Western literature. Contemporary critical work on the Bible by feminist scholars, anthropologists, linguists, and historians may also be considered.

ENLT 535 The Enlightenment in Europe (3 credits)
A comparative study of literature and ideas in eighteenth-century Europe, focusing on English, French, and German literature, with some attention to Italian and Spanish. Major literary and philosophical trends are analyzed, including the rational and satirical attack on traditional values and the current of ‘sensibility’ which stressed the powers of the emotions and the senses. Works by Swift, Voltaire, Fielding, Diderot, Johnson, Rousseau, Prevost, Goethe, Lessing, and others.

ENLT 536 The Romantic Movement (3 credits)
The origins and development of romanticism in England and Germany are compared with the later triumph of the movement in France. Representative works of Chateaubriand, Goethe, Novalis, Kleist, Hoffmann, Heine, Musset, and Nerval are studied, and their themes compared with those of the English romantics. (Taught in English. Recommended to French majors as a free elective.) Mutually Exclusive with FREN 536.

ENLT 565 Ibsen, Strindberg, and Shaw (3 credits)
