There are many exciting opportunities in the financial sector. This discipline is a training ground for many top managers in modern corporations, with studies showing that most top executives have a background in finance. The Department of Economics & Finance offers students the opportunity to study wide ranging aspects of modern finance.

The finance discipline can be classified into three major areas:

- investments,
- corporate finance, and
- markets and institutions.

This program provides students with an understanding of the financial implications inherent in virtually all business decisions. The departmental faculty has a diverse range of professional experiences and interests that enrich the classroom experience. We prepare our students for careers in corporate management, depository institutions, and financial services.
